Rivulet's diary - Log 1

The Earth is a cruel yet exhilarating place. So much beauty in possession of such terrible hands. The human race seems to think of there own self benefits, building intoxicating factories to build there own wealth, not caring a bout the vile smoke there poisoning the air with.
Forgive me, Diary. I am reading a book called Stuck on Earth, and as most books do, they chance my viewpoint on things for the duration of the novel. Particularly in this one, it's annoying how hateful the human race is.

Sometimes I worry myself. It might just be my extensive imagination, but I believe my physical and mental power is heightening. It seems my heart is getting stronger with each run I take, and I can feel i am wiser. I know more, and I am getting better at keeping my cool, and I am also learning of times when it is nessesary to let go of that control, let Instinct take over.
I am naming the internal counterpart of me Instinct, since I originally just referred to her as We or Her. She is my desires and my deep rooted emotions, my impulses and... The part of me that is human. She keeps me grounded to this body composed of cells and tissues. Instinct sees the world in the way I would, if I haven't been rewiring my brain.

I had a good dream last night! It was about SVTFOE!
Normally my brain will chose a main character to follow during the dream, and surprisingly I wasn't Star. My brain followed Marco. So basically i was Marco.
It started off kinda normally, a villain from a different dimension came and attacked. But my brain came up with a surprisingly strong villain. During the fight, Star broke her right wrist. Marco, knowing Star was in a ton of pain, wouldn't be able to focus enough to cast spells, or maybe even hold her wand. So Marco picked her up and fled behind a bush. He used his red hoodie has a makeshift cast for Star, then brought her to the nearest safe place he could find, (His dimensional scissors lost in battle) an abandoned house. Marco made a better cast for her, then barricaded the doors and everything. Star, under no pain killers what so ever, stays blacked out from the pain for the most part.
This villain being a good one, decided to try and make them mad at each other first. He finds a witch, and pays her. The witch sneaks into the house while Marco tries to find food, and enchants Star's dress to make her find Marco annoying and hard to put up with.

For the parts that Star is awake, she repeatedly snaps at Marco. Marco, thinking it's the pain talking, just grows more worried and protective of her.
Then this giant elk comes around and chases Marco. Like, twice as big as a normal elk, Marco doesn't even try to karate fight it and just locks it out of the old house. But Mr elk just rams down the rotting wooden door. He then locks himself in Star's room, which has a stronger door. He tries to wake Star up, but she just yells at him to let her sleep.

My brain wakes up and does not let me find out the ending to that situation.

Nelly threw a bag of cookies a Baxter's head. "Chill." She then bumped Maria over and looked into the microscope
"At least we know that those witchy crystals are the things are causing this. There a blue glow to these cells. The same light from your crystal."

(The next day)

When Baxter woke up again, he sat up to find his legs ridden of flesh, and that he was looking at bone.
"AHHH!" He shrieked and slammed his eyes shut. When they opened, everything looked normal.
He looked closely at his eyes in the mirror. At the side corners, a film had developed.

I had a weird dream, and it's happened before.
So there's a cave with these squirmy gross roots, even grosser I feel them even as I shift through them. It leads to some advocates office, deep within the cave. Were supposed to find the hidden entrance, and thankfully I remembered the entrance from the last time I had the dream. There was a mouse trap game, with missing pieces. If we filled the missing pieces, the entrance would unlock.

"My Dream Log" ~Rivulet~

I had a really weird, but strangely good dream. It was like watching a superhero television plot:
This first part is about BlossomGirl, aka Fiona. Fiona was very young when she discovered her super power, the ability to control a specific tree, Cherry Blossoms. Some hero's usually get more then one power often then not, but only 3% of the city's population even get one, so it was something to feel proud about they all said. But it was hard to feel strong when your power is useless.
One day, Fiona meets Maggy. They meet at the bar, and yes, there still 9 year old girls. They were both bringing there father's meal to there table's. They became friends and Maggy, with no powers, was the one who studied Fiona's. She was the one who figured it out. "Fiona, what if there's more to controling the tree then you know? What if you could make the trees do things?"

After another 4 months of experiments and trial, they finally found it. Fiona could make the blossom's spray a pollen and a special fragrance, which when inhaled, could influence others. She could make people desire food, to dance, to fight, to love. It was basically mind control expect for the part that people with extremely strong wills and (Also people without a sense of smell) the other City hero's, could fight the influence i they tried.
That week they both went about planting Cherry Blossoms all over town, in every nook they could find. Fiona used her ability to escalate the growth of the sapplings, and by the time they were 19 the trees were fully grown.
Then Fiona ran for major. Using the ability of influence, she made everyone desire to want her for there major, raining pollen down upon everything.
And she became major. Over the years and years, she was discovered. Someone with strong will had found Maggy's old journal. He was able to lull everyone to him during the night, when the tree's hold weakened when Fiona slept.

Okay, I'm going to speed it up since I'm running out of time.
(For some reason my brain likes to dream about Lloyd from Lego ninjago, but at least this time it's about the younger, eviler Lloyd)
Lloyd was misunderstood as a child. His aunt, Adviser Celestia, trainer of Superpowered kids who had extreme talent, was very overbearing when Lloyd developed an ability, teleportation. When he grew to be 7, he used his powers to steal little things, like grabbing candy from the store, going into the bathroom, and teleporting a few feet to the outside of the walls.
(Will continue later)

A few feet grew to yards, yards grew to blocks. Lloyd's teleportation abilities were devolpeing quickly. And when he robbed a bank, wanting more then sweets on his tounge, Celestia was furious. She got the police off his back, but was extremely strict from then on. Lloyd felt the tears she was shedding as they fell to the floor. He didn't want to cause more, but she wanted to turn him into a hero. He was no hero.
So he teleported away one night, never looking back. He then met Maggy. Maggy had gained a power too, but it had never been visible until it was tested by time. Maggy was 34 years old and had the body of a 17 year old. Her gift, and curse, was that her aging process was slown down. She took Lloyd in, seeing in his eyes what no one had ever seen, something even his aunt was unaware of. He looked at her with those piercing, pale blue eyes. They weren't quite on her, but she didn't care. Under Maggy's guidance, Blocks became football fields. When he seemed to be able to go no further, he could travel over half the city in seconds. Of course though, you always know where he goes. As he teleports, he leaves a trail of light in the space he travels over, though it dissipates in a minute, you could always see where he landed, which direction he went.

Hmmm. Yeah, I bet if I put this here no one will find it. The start to a new legacy that will stand next to us all.

Within Rivulet's home, you find Asteroid and Lilly banging on a large metal door, the one used to lock her in during her "fits". Roid gives up on the banging, pushes Lilly out of the way, and ignites himself, attempting to melt through the door by placing his hands on the hinges.
You don't know what's going on, so you ask.
Lilly sighs and places her face in her hands. She looks up with a worry breaking through her amber eyes.
"Something has been happening to Riv. At first it was her blanking out at random times, then the sleep walking. We didn't tell you because, well, we all know she's got her mental flaws. I thought it was some phase, it went on and off during certain times a month...
But... L-last night while she was sleeping it took her over again. She jammed the lock to the break out room and we didn't notices she was in there until it was too late..."
Lilly looks away from you and pulls her long platinum blonde hair over eyes.

Riv's mini stories present:

Crisp air whistled through the cracked window frame of Lilly's room. Pale sunlight lighting up her bed greeted her, and she arose from the blankets bundling her body up.
She enjoy the first showings of each season, even if the wonder faded quickly. Today would be a nice day for some fun, and to Lilly, fun wasn't usually safe.
Bundled in long sleeves, two pairs of socks, and a scuffed jean jacket, Lilly grabbed her ski mask and slid it over her skin and hair to fit it around her face. Knowing her dad was probably sleeping, she slid out the window and out to the early winter landscape of the bustling city she calls home.

The early hours of the day were spent running across rooftops, scouting. She didn't have any official powers, just a ripped bod, martial art and weaponry skills, as well as a genetic mutation that gave her more jumping power then regular legs. She wasn't anthing special, even though she used to be. She missed the magic she used to possess, but was stolen from her. Lilly search the city often for crime to stop, the way she always has. Getting her power revoked wasn't going to stop her passion. She rather be punching strangers then getting mixed up with the wrong crew.

There. A man, sneaking down an alley with his hood pulled over his head. Lilly decided to follow, hoping it would turn out to be something interesting.

Following the dodgy man from the rooftops was challenging, but scaling the jumps of the different buildings wasn't a challenge. She let the daylight run through her rushing hair as she scaled down the walls as the shady being slowed. Swinging her legs back and forth as she sat on a railing, Lilly watched the man come up to a door and knock 8 times, each knock being slightly different.

When Roid finally melts through the door, you see Riv stepping into a pod of some sort. It's a complex machine with a matching pod and loads of equipment. Oncilla is ducktaped in the corner (Sorry bout that).
The mahcine turns on. Lights flash and steam appears from both pods. In moments, both tubes open. In the first, Rivulets body is lying incapacitated, and the second, another body? The new girl step out. Her eyes are slinted and her pupils are so small you can barely see them. Pale lips curl in a sharp, malice filled smile.
As she gets closer, your shocked to see she looks so much like Riv. The same honey blonde hair and sturdy build. And... Her body is naked. She appears to just be a child.
Roid pulls back. "Its been done. I-I can't harm her now..." He stammers and tears made of magma slide from his eyes. "What's going on Roid?!" Lilly shouts impatiently, and throws the new body her coat to put on.
"Care for me to explain?" Shes staring at you, the coat thrown loosely over her frame.
Asteroid gulps. "Lilly. This is Instinct. My little sister.
"Finally someone who can speak up. Yes, fortold Child of the Moon, and your abomination, Instinct. Nice to meet you. Well, I have met you, just from Rivulet's subconscious. I should say nice for you to me me." Instincts looks down to inspect her nails, which are blade sharp.

And there the were. Maria had pushed Baxter onto a counter and was holding his eye open. "What the heck are you kids doing?! Your friend here has developed A THIRD EYELID. Cats have those!" Maria shrieked and threw her hands up. "I give up. This is outside my comfort zone."
"Well. I'd know if he was turning into a cat. I'm allergic." Nelly sniffed his head and waited for a sneeze.
"P-please don't, don't do that. Okay?" Baxter gently pushed her away. "Can you explain why I see bone?" Baxter willed the film to slide out from the corners of his eyes until they were covered, I which was a bit gross. He looked at the world in a blue haze. Baxter could see the skeleton of Nelly. Why are her bones so weird? Only her, if he looked too long, she began to fade in certain places, like a ghost.
"My guess? The drug testing you've been doing is meant to enhance the natural abilities of the eyes. You've got X-ray vision my freaky pal." Maria started packing up. "When they come for you to take you away and experiment on you, leave my out of your story."

Why does the child work at a pizza shop now?
My heart leaps as I find him eating with the others for the summer. I plead for him to look at me, but he seems to be trying to avoid my gaze.
We finally talk when were alone. He's crying. Don't cry, I'm here. I'm finally here. Your not alone. My light can protect us both. I promise.

Log 1, Month 3: This log is being recorded for the purpose of future research, and in case this gets us killed.

The night was first. His new abilities are physically based, so knowing where his gifts were centered gave him a headstart. Within the first month he had mastered his first power.

Next was the stars. Me. He had gained an ability from that special night. He insisted I must have gained one too. I didn't believe him at first, but it happened. He swore he kept seeing magenta in my eyes when I got excited, or upset, and I confessed sometimes I saw night blue flashing through his. We consoled our researcher and ally.
She said if emotions of stress we're linked to my flashes, my gift was most likely protection based, to keep me safe. Prey in the wild have a unique assortment of defensive techniques.
She said the most likely way to figure out my ability would be to make me feel like my life was in danger.
The thought of it scared me, but I had to know. Wouldn't you? I told him to find a way to scare me, and to keep it secret. I needed to be heart-attack scared for this to work.
End log 1.

Miiiillllkkk ddddrrrreeeaaammm:
So were at a my old grocery home, doing something, and the walls expand. I have my flight capabilities, and per usual. Something about the far back wall is important.
I'm soaring, I'm flying.
My heart is smiling.
I know going higher is worth it.
But then I start falling.
The world is coming down,
On the back of my mind.
I know something's gonna happen!
My heart skips a beat,
Because your there to catch me.
I wanna say hi but I'm too shy.
And I know were seeking each other,
But it's too late...
Oh it's too late.
But I jump like the sky,
I'll climb so high,
Just to see your face again.
He catches me and we run, something's chasing us but I don't know what.
Our minds are soaring, we rise faster, stronger then before. Your catching my back, and the path ahead is though to pass, but if we work together, we can make this last.
We've got each other, a feeling I've always wished for. Sweet dreams, my dear Milk.

"My Dream Log" ~Rivulet~

aquanight77

Uhhhh. I dreamed up an imaginary boyfriend for me/comet.
For those who don't know from previous posts in here, Comet, who was originally Starflight, but the I decided I probably shouldn't have stolen the Nightwing's name, is my superhero Sona who I dream, write, and draw about, waaaaay too often.

So I dreamed about the aftermath, defeating Jay (The supervillain), and what happen after we met the main goal of the entire plot.
After killing Jay, Nightblade (Baxter)(May change Nightblade to Nightshade at some point), no longer wants to be a hero. He wants to forget he has powers and get the life of a normal person back, after being on the run for so long as criminal vigilantes. Comet doesn't want to help, but cannot disobey him. They fake his death.
Without a partner, Comet no longer lusts for the thrill of fighting, entering a state of depression. Baxter urges her to fake her own death as well, and join him. By this point, he's already changed his name and moved to Canada.
Comet doesn't want to go. She's become emotionally attached to a life on the run.
She creates her own plan. She won't fake her life, but publicly announce she's lost her powers, and "let" them arrest her. With her powers, she could just burst through the door of the prison and leave, but she had a plan.
Comet uses the last of her cash stash to hire a group of people to help her escape. The men from the "White Eye" cult, help her escape from a transfer unit taking her to prison with weapons and explosives.
It was a clever trick. Many people questioned it. "If Comet really had her powers, why did she need help to escape?"
It was enough to trick the puplic.
What Comet didn't anticipate, was the men from White Eye kidnapped her. She had to keep the powerless act, so she had to let them take her.

So this is about when the dream really comes into focus. I'll post in separate.

Aditional info: Comet is known as "The City's Ghost", having some traditional powers of a ghost. Invisibility, and a strange combination of flight + intangibility, which occurs in a burst of magenta pink light. Powers are emotionally based. She cannot activate her powers on her own, unless under extreme emotions. If she gets too happy or scared, her eyes turn pink, which is bad if you don't want someone to see you with glowing pink eyes.
